

110,000 people are dying. We can help.

Though saving a life is a supreme Jewish value, many Jews pass on the opportunity to donate life-saving organs after death despite strong support for donation from ALL major denominations of Judaism.

Why are we so hesitant?

Join us for a community-wide virtual symposium

Judaism & Organ Donation

Issues and Answers

Program Highlights:

- Rabbi Ari Perl, Vice President of Multicultural Engagement at LiveOnNY, will provide a statistical overview, demystify the myths surrounding the organ donation process and address relevant issues of Halakha & Jewish medical ethics
- Rabbi Lester Bronstein of Bet Am Synagogue will reflect on his own family's decision to save lives while grappling with tragic loss
- Alan Ganek, heart transplant recipient, will share his powerful story of second chances
- Significant time will be allotted for participant Q & A
